Wrought Iron Products For Any Space

Winchester Gardens announces the release of a new line of wrought iron furniture and décor, from fences to benches to garden ornaments. These products make a claim for functionality, durability, and sharp-looking design. John Jordan, a member of the Winchester Gardens team, says: “Our goal is to provide quality designs for every type of outdoor living space, and for all seasons.”

Jordan says these products are unique since they feature an environmentally friendly coating that produces a finish that is durable and resistant to the elements. For this new line, Winchester Gardens has teamed up with Titus, Inc. in order to produce these American-made metal wares with a coating that contains no VOC’s, has a durable finish that dries quickly after rain, and is cooler to the touch in the summer heat.

But Jordan is quick to remind that Winchester Gardens has outdoor items for other seasons as well. “One of the coolest things may be our snow gauge,” Jordan says. “Imagine being a ten-year old, wondering how much snow has fallen, and if you will have school the next day. You would love this thing.”

Winchester Gardens’ Emerson fencing is another unique product that features a style-driven flexibility for yard design. But why call it “Emerson”? “Well, Ralph Waldo Emerson promoted the idea of self-reliance,” Jordan says. “We want our customers to be able to create and control their outdoor living spaces. This easy-install fencing is a part of that vision.” Jordan says this fencing is ideal for many situations, but especially for pet owners: “If you decide to adopt a new pet from the pound and need a fence fast, Emerson fencing provides a quick, durable, and secure option. No digging holes and no concrete.”

When considering Winchester Gardens’ designs, Jordan is quick to point out that these products are meant for those living in towns, cities, and rural areas—in all regions of the country. “Our hope is that a single piece will transform the space it occupies. Whether it’s a wrought iron bird for your rock garden, or a bench for your arboretum, we can provide compelling accents to any outdoor space.”
